The female population in the Milwaukee DMA per the Nielsen Company is reported at 51.4%; the percentage of full-time females in the Milwaukee PBS workforce is 41.18%, and the percentage of part-time females in the Milwaukee PBS workforce is 46.67%.

Diversity training for Milwaukee PBS management staff is provided through seminars and webinars conducted by the Wisconsin Broadcasters Association (WBA), the Public Media Business Association (PMBA), the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) and in-service training materials provided by the MATC Human Resources Department. Topics have included legal issues in hiring, promoting EEO, and preventing unlawful discrimination to FCC EEO tracking, outreach, and reporting requirements. MATC Human Resource professionals provide "Beyond Bias" training materials for selection committees in candidate screening, interview question development, selection of candidates and ensuring confidentiality of the process.

2022 CPB Diversity Report Statement

The Milwaukee PBS television stations WMVS and WMVT, as a department of Milwaukee Area Technical College (MATC), are committed to diversity in hiring, student recruitment and training, and acquiring and producing programming that celebrates our area's rich cultural heritage.

The Milwaukee PBS goal is to "strive for hiring pools that are representative of the population of the service area". In most cases, hiring pools have included minority representation, although technical positions often generate a lower response.

Milwaukee PBS' service to the community considers diversity in program selection, local productions, outreach efforts, and web offerings. Milwaukee PBS strives to acquire and produce programs that include an editorial balance, inclusive representation, and non-traditional role models both in front of and behind the scenes.

The Milwaukee PBS broadcast services are comprised of two high definition and four standard definition programming streams. The two high-definition channels, WMVS 10.1 and WMVT 36.1 offer locally scheduled programs from PBS, APT, NETA, and the BBC, augmented by local, state, regional, independent, and collaborative productions. National programs of note are often presented with local follow-up productions and station outreach efforts. Discussion panels, and community engagement sessions include local experts from diverse backgrounds to add depth and conversations to and about the presented program topic. Milwaukee PBS acquires and schedules specials around monthly national observances that can include racial, cultural, and national commemorations of significance. Milwaukee PBS' digital sub channels – World, Create, and the PBS Kids channel, often offer programs that highlight diverse issues.

Two Milwaukee PBS series productions stand out for their focus on minority populations in our coverage area. Black Nouveau highlights the events and issues in the African American community with positive stories told through noteworthy residents and leaders. Adelante approaches the Latino community in a similar fashion, and is presented with open captions that translate the native language of guests so both Spanish and English speaking viewers can benefit from the program's content. Both Black Nouveau and Adelante continue to win local, regional and national awards and both programs have also received multiple Emmy Award nominations and have been presented with Emmy Awards for segments or program specials.

Milwaukee PBS productions include African American and Latino producers and program hosts.

"You Are Your Child's First Teacher" is a dedicated section of the Milwaukee PBS website to help parents and caregivers make the most of the first five years of a child's life. With content presented in English, Spanish, and Hmong, the website contains child development information, resources, and even short parenting tip videos.

Though the MATC office of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion employees assigned to the television stations have participated in training in the areas of anti-bias and managing a transformative culture. All employees have also received training on skills relating to harassment, diversity and inclusion, managing bias and bystander intervention through the annual CPB training offering.

Milwaukee PBS also houses the MATC Television and Video Production Associate Degree program and the eProduction Associate Degree program as well as two technical diplomas in the areas of studio or field assistance. These diploma and two-year programs train students for futures in the television, corporate video and social media industries in an actual broadcast facility under the supervision of professional instructors and television station staff members. The programs currently consist of a diverse enrollment of students and the program counselors and instructors continue to recruit a diverse student population into the program.

Currently for this semester there are five full-time instructors one of which is an Asian American female and five part-time instructors of which two are female, one of which is a Latina. There is also a part-time educational assistant for the program. One of the part time instructors is also on the MATC HSI (Hispanic Serving Institution) planning committee and there have been discussions to offer some of the course offerings in Spanish.
